Advanced Land-Use and Development Administration

Planning 203 is a new hands-on course designed to apply skills discussed in Planning 103 for administering and interpreting land-use (zoning and subdivision) regulations. This course features in-class exercises that will provide an opportunity for participants to analyze and interpret a land-use and development code, to formulate answers to typical land-use administration questions, and to review development plans.

This session qualifies for certificate credit in the Academy for Excellence in Local Government Leadership, and the Delaware Planning Education Program.
